Jared Grimes is a student of Architecture at Drexel University, with 5 years of experience at various design firms in Philadelphia. He's had experience working on a variety of projects in residential, long-term care, corporate interiors and restaurant design, and been on projects from their earliest stages through to completion. Presently he is seeking to gain more technical experience, to learn more about how a building is actually put together, to help round out his architectural education as he completes his academic studies.

Jared is due to graduate with an accredited Bachelor of Architecture degree in June 2018.
